WHEREAS, domestic violence is a pattern of controlling behaviors – violence or threats of violence – that one person uses to establish power over a current or former spouse, intimate partner or family or household member in order to control that person's actions and activities; and

WHEREAS, domestic violence may include threats, physical violence, sexual assault, stalking, kidnapping and many other types of unwanted behavior or any criminal offense resulting in physical injury or death; and

WHEREAS, domestic violence can happen to anyone, regardless of age, religion, or social, economic, ethnic or educational background. It happens to men, women, elderly and children; and

WHEREAS, domestic violence is a vicious and pervasive social problem, destabilizing families and threatening every sector of the community; and

WHEREAS, according to the National Coalition Against Domestic Violence, a woman is assaulted or beaten every nine seconds in the United States; and

WHEREAS, one-third of women and one-fourth of men will encounter some form of physical violence from an intimate partner within their lifetimes; and

WHEREAS, only 34 percent of victims hurt by their intimate partners receive medical care for their wounds; and

WHEREAS, one in 15 children are exposed to domestic violence each year; and

WHEREAS, many children who witness domestic violence at home suffer silently because the abuse remains a family secret; and

WHEREAS, fears of reprisal, escalated violence, financial ruin, deportation, and other factors make it difficult for many victims of domestic violence to report crimes committed against them; and

WHEREAS, El Nuevo Herald recently ran a local series on domestic violence, reporting Miami-Dade County leads the state with 9,811 cases of domestic violence reported in 2014; and

WHEREAS, children exposed to domestic violence at home are at risk of post-traumatic stress, depression, and anxiety, as well as low self-esteem, and poor school performance; and

WHEREAS, children who see domestic violence at home may grow up to become domestic violence aggressors themselves; and

WHEREAS, education is crucial to encouraging children to report domestic violence and to breaking deep-rooted patterns and cycles of abuse; and

WHEREAS, this Board desires to launch a program to educate children in the classroom from an early age about domestic violence, including how to identify domestic violence triggers, control violent impulses, and recognize and report signs of abuse; and
